SIMCOE – It’s lights, camera, action time in Haldimand, Norfolk and Brant counties as elementary and high school students gear up for Holy Trinity Catholic High School’s third annual film festival.

Young filmmakers will be competing for nearly $2,000 in cash prizes. Judging and screening of the two- to five-minute films take place June 1 at Holy Trinity in Simcoe.

“The gala screening promises to be an exciting event,” said Caroline Freibauer, a teacher at Holy Trinity. “These young filmmakers are so talented and creative.”

Judges for the Holy Trinity Film Festival will include Laurier Brantford media instructor Rick Gamble, who is a former CKCO television reporter.

Past winning films have included an animated short from Simcoe Composite High School, a gripping narrative on cut-throat competition in the lemonade stand business and a re-enactment of a story from the Old Testament.

More than 25 entries created by groups and individuals were received last year from high school and elementary students. Organizers are expecting that number to grow this year.
